Cognition in the WiNd

Edwin Hutchins defines himself as a “lifelong surfer, sailor, an ocean lover”. Many researchers turn out to be passionate sailors even though they do not do specific research on sailing or navigation. We invited some of them to a panel to share and shape research ideas on navigation based on their personal experience and their theoretical insight.

Introduction: Ed Hutchins (UCSD): How the activity of sailing presents challenges for cognitive science

Laurent Cohen (Département de Neurologie, Hôpital de la Salpêtrière)

Francesca Cozzolino (Ensadlab-Université PSL/Lesc-Université Paris Nanterre)

Beatrice Fraenkel (Centre Maurice Halbwachs, EHESS)

11:30am-1pm

Valeria Giardino (AHP-PReST, Nancy): Anchors in Mathematics

Hugo Mercier (Nicod): Reason in the Wild

Afternoon 2:30pm-6pm

Bernard Conein (Nice): Opening address

Jacques Theureau (IRCAM Paris): The Hutchins Heritage

Edwin Hutchins (UCSD): How do the current rapid changes in measurement technologies impact on the cognitive and social sciences?

Free and open to all, but registration necessary.
